Not illustrated. 1904 Excerpt: .had in view--says her husband--the dreadful sleeplessness to which she had been in bondage for a quarter of a century, whose grasp had become more and more relentless, and the effects of which upon her nervous system were such as words can hardly describe. On Monday, the symptoms abated somewhat; but at night she was worse. Her disease caused her an agony not to be told; but she bore all with patience--with a patience which excited the wonder of her medical attendant. In the early morning, all the family were gathered round her bedside. Her breathing became slower and less convulsive, and at length gentle like that of one asleep; the distressed look changed into a look of sweet repose; the eyes shut, the lips closed, and the whole scene recalled her own lines: -- Oh, where are words to tell the joy unpriced, Of the...
