I hardly need tell you that you should always be clean and neat. Although you may neither have nor want fine clothes, you should try to keep tidy those which your parents provide for you; and it is not nice for either your teacher or your class-fellows to have to sit near dirty children. You must obey your teacher at once when you ai-e told to do or not to do a thing. This is, in fact, the first duty you have to do in school, and if you do this well all the rest will follow. Bear in mind that what your teacher tells you is for your good, though you may think it very hard that she will not let you talk a little to the girl who sits near you, or go out of your place just for one minute, or play with your fingers, or eat fruit or sweets, or do any other little thing of the sort. These may not be wrong at home or in. your play-ground, but they are very wrong in school, because they prevent the lessons from going on well, and so rob yourself as well as others. Would you ever become wise or clever, think you, if you went to a school where the children were allowed to talk, play, run about, eat, or be idle when lessons are going on? I am sure none of you would really like such a school. And...
