Anthropogenic activities beginning in the late 19th century and continuing through today have adversely affected the natural resources and aquatic biota of the lagoon. A major concern is the large deposition of muck sediment that has had a deleterious effect on seagrass growth. The major cause of these sediment deposits most likely is due to stormwater heavily laden with fluvial sediment, discharging through the S-155 control structure on the West Palm Beach (C-51) Canal. To address this problem, the U.S. Geological Survey and the Palm Beach County Department of Environmental Resource Management engaged in a joint partnership utilizing surrogate technology to develop rating curve estimators based on the relation between suspended sediment and different explanatory variables, including turbidity and discharge. To fulfill this objective, a continuous, instream water-quality monitoring station that records turbidity data in real time was installed unstream of structure S-155. Point samples were
